Treasury reference to the Barons of the Exchequer, Scotland, of the petition of Sir James Campbell, bart., shewing that by Act of Parliament in 1672 (ratified in 1703) the Privy Council of Scotland was empowered, when grain exceeded the prices therein determined, to grant licences to import victual from Ireland: which [power in the said Privy Council of Scotland] by an Act of 6 Anne, c. [11, Article VI], was entirely taken away [by implication, by the said Article enforcing without qualification the prohibition of the import of victual from Ireland into Scotland]: that in the year 1709 the western parts of Scotland were obliged by reason of great scarcity to import from Ireland, and the receivers being equally punishable with the importers many have been prosecuted and ordained to pay 100*l.* each: therefore praying that since the penalty they have incurred does by Act of Parliament belong to the Queen, her Majesty will graciously discharge same. Out Letters (North Britain) II, p. 343.
